

CONNECTION

The love I feel from my children
Is a song that fills my heart
A hymn going up to heaven
My mind released from gravity on the singing

They know the love I have for them
Their foundation on which they stand
Providing them with courage to move forward
To live their lives independently, though with connection

An invisible line allowing freedom to grow
Elastic, stretching as far as necessary for their fulfillment
Always present to grasp when times are tough
A level of security only family love provides

The union, severed partially by death
Remnants remain to provide strength and structure
To bolster confidence, knowing their proud heritage
The connection rebuilt, their children secure
